Description
To achieve this mission, ACC&D provides scientifically sound and animal welfare-oriented resources to stakeholders, supports the appropriate distribution of available products suitable for the humane control of cat and dog populations, and facilitates research on topics relevant to the application, acceptance, and use of non-surgical fertility control methods.
ACC&D is a not-for-profit organization formed in 2000. It grew out of a pivotal meeting at Virginia Tech and in early years operated as a program of Auburn University. The Organization was incorporated in 2005 as a stand-alone 501(c)(3). It has held six international symposia to convene researchers, academics, veterinarians, animal welfare professionals, and other stakeholders in advancing cat and dog fertility control. The 6th International Symposium on Non-Surgical Contraceptive Methods of Pet Population was held in July 2018.
In 2018, the Organization was guided by a 12-person Board of Directors and a 13-member Science Advisory Board. Both Boards have international representation and reflect significant volunteer support from senior leaders, veterinarians, scientists and academics.
Several of these volunteers also contribute as the Scientific Advisory Board of the Michelson Prize and Grants program of the Found Animals Foundation, which has provided over $15 million in grants since 2009 to nearly 40 projects toward development of a non-surgical sterilant(s) for dogs and cats.
ACC&D's Council of Stakeholders comprises leading organizations which provide key strategic and networking support as well as key financial resources to help ensure sustainability. Council members include Alley Cat Allies, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA), Best Friends Animal Society, The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS), International Cat Care, International Fund for Animal Welfare, Maddie's Fund, Petco Foundation, PetSmart Charities, and the Regina Bauer Frankenberg Foundation.
Based in Portland, Oregon, ACC&D relies on grants from other not-for-profit organizations, private foundations, and individual major donors for its primary support

Description
Michelson-funded research involves a single injection to sterilize female cats by delivering a gene whose expression prevents the development of eggs in the ovaries. The treatment has been shown to suppress fertility in female mice for over a year - their reproductive lifetime. A second study in cats began in early 2019.

the Globe: A Decadal Reappraisal of the Practice and Promise of TNVR", Our analysis addresses the impacts of different methods of cat management on "preventable deaths" of cats-both kittens and adult cats subjected to lethal management.
Finding suggest that "preventable deaths" are comprised mostly of kitten mortality, rather than adults, for all management scenarios. High-intensity TNR reduces cumulative preventable deaths over 10 years more so than other tested scenarios (including lethal management), which is hugely supportive of TNR. However, low-intensity TNR results in more preventable deaths, a reminder of the importance of being strategic when conducting TNR campaigns.
The manuscript was submitted in October, has been reviewed and resubmitted with final edits; we anticipate that it will be published shortly. Once the publications are complete, we will translate results into a more "user-friendly" practical guide with strategies and tips to most effectively and strategically conduct TNR campaigns based on the data we have collected and analyzed.
Ethical Decision-Making:
In the early part of the year, our article, "Exploring the Gaps in Practical Ethical Ethical Guidance for Animal Welfare Considerations of Field Interventions and Innovation Targeting Dogs and Cats," was published in the journal Animals for its special issue devoted to animal ethics. In May, we hosted a round table discussion on the topic at The HSUS Expo. Participants spoke about the ethical quandaries they face in their work at shelters, such as the conflicts that arise between staff when a decision needs to be made as to the fate of an ill cat. The rest of 2018 focused on developing a guidance document for ethical decision-making when conducting projects in the field. The guidance document and associated toolkits are near completion, with contributions from experts in the field.
Female Cat Contraceptive Development: In 2018 ACC&D published two articles regarding our study of the contraceptive effect of the GonaCon immunocontraceptive vaccine in female cats in the Journal of Feline Medicine and Surgery. The first, "Effectiveness of GonaCon as an immunocontraceptive in colony-housed cats," (published February 2018), highlighted the study's methods and results. The second, "Hybrid model intermediate between a laboratory and field study: A humane paradigm shift in feline research" (published July 2018), spoke to the unique approach of our study using outbred cats in a simulated free-roaming setting. Regrettably our study results did not show a long enough duration of effect to advance this GnRH vaccine as a multi-year contraceptive for free roaming cats. However, the hope is that our model provides an example for how research can be done with cat welfare as the utmost priority, and our publications make this as accessible as possible.

Marking non-surgically contracepted/sterilized animals:
Our project exploring the use of microneedle patches to tattoo an animal's ear progressed substantially in 2018. Microneedle patches are being developed to administer the flu vaccine to humans, among other uses. Application is reported to be painless by both adults and children, and one study using the patch to administer the rabies vaccine in the ears of dogs suggests it causes minimal to no pain in dogs. (In this study, 0% of the six dogs showed signs of intolerance to patch application during prime vaccination, compared to 60% of the dogs given a traditional injection. It is also of interest to note that antibody titers after vaccination by microneedle patch were similar to responses to intramuscular vaccines at the same dose!)
We've been working closely with Dr. Mark Prausnitz of the Georgia Institute of Technology to explore using these patches to tattoo the inside of a dog or a cat's ear to indicate that it has been non-surgically sterilized and/or vaccinated. So far things are looking good!
We've been able to load patches with both regular and UV-excitabile ink, and into the shape of numbers.
The patches we applied first to pig cadaver ears. After that looked promising, patches were then applied to dog and cat cadaver ears (the animals were euthanized for non-related reasons), and the results are so promising that by by year end, we are in the process of designing a pilot study to test the patches in awake dogs and cats.

Once the 990 is approved by these officers, copies of the 990 are distributed to the Board.

Pt VI, Line 12c: ACC&D reviewed and updated its Conflict of Interest Policy in 2013, and a Conflict of Interest Questionnaire was completed by Directors in 2013, 2014, 2016, 2017 and 2018. ACC&D monitors and enforces its Conflict relationships with the Board members and by means of discussions at Board meetings.

Pt VI, Line 19: ACC&D's annual financial statements and 990's are available
